»Migrant Birds«

A call for tolerance, love and solidarity

Since they are migrant birds, Luka's new friends have to journey on in autumn. But Oleg, Madame Petrova and Paulinchen don't want to leave. They want to experience winter and go to school. But where to stay? Luckily, there's Miss Lorenz with her big heart, caring for those who don't know where to go. In wonderful, nuanced and yet powerful pictures Michael Roher tells a story painfully present these days: the story of a family being displaced from their home and settling down somewhere else under difficult conditions. A call for tolerance.

»Pepe and Lolo«

Dare to love and be loved!

Lolo loves wearing bright colours and is very fond of playing the violin for hours despite everyone complaining about the noise. Pepe is different. Whenever someone is giving him a funny look for sitting on the street and talking to a snail he blushes with shame. One day, Pepe and Lolo meet and a delicate friendship develops. While Lolo is sending Pepe postcards and expresses her affection, it is hard for Pepe to be loved the way he truly is. A story about courage, love and being loved.

»Giveaways«

Trade and share like the Josephs!

The mayor in his underwear, a bear as a pet, people donating what they don't need, getting what they need in return? Is that possible? Yes, in every town that family Joseph visits, because they have an excellent idea: Everybody who has something they don't need can offer it to someone who has use for it. But their good intentions arouse mistrust. Everything for free? Some people don't believe it, but family Joseph knows how to share and care!

»Papilio's World«

A poetic vision of a diverse world full of freedom

It's springtime! Papilio spreads his arms, waiting for the wind to carry him through the streets. »Come with me!« he calls out to the man with the dog, to the girl with the freckles, to the tightrope walker and the barefooted woman. They all follow Papilio to listen to him dreaming about another world. A world where people live where they want to live, cook what they like to eat, have time to do what they love to do and go where their hearts lead them. A completely queer idea? Not for the girl with the freckles who wants to give Papilio's dream a chance. Together they wait for the wind ...
