WELCOME TO A WORLD WHERE WOMEN HOLD THE POWER.

They dominate workplaces, public spaces and government.

They are no longer afraid to cross a dark car park, catch the last train, or walk home alone.

With the Curfew law in place, all men are electronically tagged and must stay at home after 7pm.

It changed things for the better. Until now.

A woman is murdered late at night and evidence suggests she knew her attacker.

It couldn't have been a man because a Curfew tag is a solid alibi... Isn't it?

I DID IT FOR YOU

If you could test your son for a gene that predicts violence, would you do it?

Antonia and Bea are sisters, and doting mothers to their sons. But that is where their similarities end.

Antonia had her son tested to make sure he didn't possess the "violent" M gene. Bea refuses to let her son take the test. His life should not be determined by a positive or negative result.

These women will go to any length to protect their sons. But one of them is hiding a monster. And there will be fatal consequences for everybody....

"If you've ever been young, you will love
The Rachel Incident like I did"
- Gabrielle Zevin

The Rachel Incident is an all-consuming love story. But it's not the one you're expecting. It's unconventional and messy. It's young and foolish. It's about losing and finding yourself. But it is always about love.

When Rachel falls in love with her married professor, Dr Byrne, her best friend James helps her devise a plan to seduce him. But what begins as a harmless crush soon pushes their friendship to its limits. Over the course of a year they will find their lives ever more entwined with the Byrnes' and be faced with impossible choices and a lie that can't be taken back...

THE POET'S GUIDE TO TIME TRAVEL

UK Publisher: HarperCollins (UK & Comm, ex. Canada), Spring 2025

Genre: Speculative Romantic Comedy

Rights Sold: US (William Morrow)

Cambridge University, 2005. Student Joe Greene dreams of being a famous poet, one day. He doubts it will actually happen.

Then, the future finds him—in the form of Esi. She has come to Cambridge as part of a time traveling expedition, to witness the greatest hits of history first-hand. The subject of this tour: Joe Greene. In Esi's time, Joe is as famous as Shakespeare and Byron. And this is the year he will meet the love of his life, fellow student and aspiring actress Diana, who will become his muse and the subject of his most famous love poems.

Joe thinks his future is set—until he realises that Esi's arrival in 2005 has changed everything. Rather than falling for Diana, he's falling for Esi instead.

Should Joe risk his dreams to follow his heart? And can he really write his own destiny into reality?

Praise for Catriona Silvey:

"An incredible debut... IT BLEW MY MIND. It is what fans of the THE TIME-TRAVELER'S WIFE have been craving." - Liberty Hardy, Book Riot Senior CE

"Inventive, bold and surprising... Cleverly constructed and highly entertaining." - Charles Yu

"Brilliant, lush, and achingly imaginative! I love this book in every life."
- Beth Revis

Joyful, devastating, and profound, Meet Me in Another Life is a story of love and connection in every possible form.

Thora and Santi have met before...

Under the clocktower in central Cologne, with nothing but the stars above and their futures ahead.

They will meet again...

They don't know it yet, but they'll meet again: in numerous lives they will become friends, colleagues, lovers, enemies – meeting over and over for the first time, every time; each coming to know every version of the other.

Only they can make sure it's not for the last time.

But as they're endlessly drawn together and the lines between their different lives begin to blur, they are faced with one question: why?

They must discover the truth of their strange attachment before this, and all their lives, are lost forever.

DARK ISLAND

UK Publisher: HarperNorth (WEL), April 2024

Genre: Investigative Crime

Rights Sold: Czech (Bourdon), French (JC Lattes), Swedish (Lind & Co), Ukrainian (Laboratory), Film/TV (Black Camel Productions)

Midwinter in Orkney. Six hours of daylight. A race against time to catch a killer.

Reporter Freya Sinclair has always known she was different. While waiting on the outcome of an autism assessment, Freya uproots her life in Glasgow, quitting her job at one of Scotland's top broadsheets and taking a local beat in her childhood home of Orkney. But her plans for a quiet life are shattered when human remains are unburied by a winter storm on Orkney's wild Atlantic coast.

The identity of the bones opens old wounds in the islands, and sheds light on a darker truth nobody wants to accept. As the nights draw in, Freya's obsessive hunt for answers turns into a cat and mouse game, with each secret she unearths threatening her job, her family, and presenting a murderer with their next victim.

In a place where nothing stays buried forever, is uncovering the truth more important than saving lives?

Early reviews from NetGalley UK:

"A cracking debut and I'm already very much looking forward to what Daniel does next." 5 stars

"Fabulously dark tale set on the Scottish islands. Great descriptions of the locations and characters that I couldn't wait to find out what happens to them next!" 5 stars

"A great thriller, it was a fast-paced, realistic read that had me turning the pages late into the night!" 5 stars

"This book was brilliant! Well-planned, fast-paced and a joy to read. I am very much looking forward to whatever this author writes next, because if this is a debut we are all in for quite a treat." 5 stars

"A pacy read with a great female lead and an evocative setting. Dark Island would make a great TV crime drama series too!" 5 stars

"I absolutely raced through this fast paced, exciting murder mystery set in Orkney. Daniel Aubrey's writing skills and descriptions successfully transported me to winter in the dark islands. Newspaper reporter Freya is such a brilliant and complex character that I hope will appear in more books." 5 stars

"This was a fast-paced, gritty read. It was beautifully written with vivid imagery and not an ounce of descriptive cliché which I find in most thriller novels. I loved this brilliant and complex female lead and thoroughly look forward to the next instalment." 5 stars

"A well-paced, gripping read, set in Orkney, this book was a real page turner. Good for fans of Peter May's Lewis trilogy, and made me hungry for more." 5 stars

"Throughout, the novel is propulsive and immersive (apart from the times that it got so tense I had to take a breather)." 4 stars

THE HOUSE OF THE WITCH by Clare Marchant

UK Publisher: Boldwood (WEL), August 2024

Genre: Historical Fiction

Rights Available: Dramatisation / Translation

Two wise women. Two men who want to crush them. Centuries apart, accusations of witchcraft, possession and insanity threaten their existence.

In 2024 Adrianna is staying at a cottage in Norfolk whilst taking a sabbatical from the pressures of her high-flying career. Her self-confidence is at rock bottom... perhaps her partner Rick's suggestion that she give up work is the right one.

Searching for a diversion from the demons which plague her, Adrianna decides to clear the overgrown garden where she finds a gravestone bearing a witch's symbol. She starts researching and discovers the cottage was once owned by Ursula Broome, who in 1646 was accused of witchcraft.

Intertwined with Adrianna's story is that of Ursula. Having seen violence in her parents' marriage, she's made the decision she will never marry. She fends off the advances of local physician Oliver Bruton who's angry when she rejects him. Spurned, he begins a sinister persecution against her and her decision to live freely on her own terms. Between her work as a midwife and the medicines she sells, Ursula believes she has no need for a man, but this ideal leaves her unprotected in a patriarchal world. One where an accusation of witchcraft and being possessed by the devil is a constant dark danger for those who do not conform to society.

As Adrianna learns about Ursula's story and it creeps towards its terrifying conclusion, she begins to realise that she's been missing clues in plain sight. Rick has been subtly manipulating and controlling her just as Oliver did to Ursula, and she too is in danger. Both women must fight to survive.

Extract:

A loud banging at the door stopped Ursula's hand, and in a single moment the half-skinned rabbit she held between her knees was under a sack beneath the table. She kicked some of the straw which was strewn across the floor over the pool of blood at her feet. Poaching carried the death sentence, and although like her neighbours Ursula considered the fields around her cottage to be common land the local squire did not, he'd enclosed them and declared them his own.

'Ursula, thank our Lord in heaven you are here,' the young girl on the doorstep anxiously jiggling from foot to foot was in her early adolescence and the eldest of seven children belonging to the blacksmith. Her face carried the pinched hollow look of a child who rarely got enough to eat and beneath the knitted blanket she wore around her shoulders her frame was all angular bones. Behind her the haar, the sea fog which had edged it way across the land overnight now lay heavy and damp, suffocating the sun and silencing any noise. Experience told Ursula that it was unlikely to lift all day and they'd enter darkness under the same dank mantle. It hung in the air sucking the smell of wood smoke from the chimneys and down to the ground.

'I would not be out in this weather,' Ursula pointed out, adding, 'is the babe on its way?' The blacksmith's wife Joan was due to deliver her eighth child and as local midwife she was expecting to be called.

'Aye,' the girl nodded, 'she is near her time now, she has been labouring since last night. This baby is taking its time.'

'Wait while I get my bag of herbs and I will walk back with you,' Ursula said. She quickly damped the fire down to ensure no stray sparks could set her cottage ablaze whilst she was out, and after tying her shawl on she picked up a leather satchel. It contained all she'd need at a birth.

Can a return to the past be the start of something new? Warm, romantic and enchanting - the new novel from the author of The Lighthouse Bookshop and The Forgotten Garden.

Two sisters. One unexpected inheritance.

The Crowdies have worked the same landscape on the Scottish coast for generations. When Bern Crowdie passes away, everyone expects the farm to pass to his youngest daughter Nina who, with her young son Barnaby, has been living and working with her father for the past five years. Her older sister Bette left when she was eighteen, vowing never to return. Now a successful lawyer in London, it's doubtful she'll even make the funeral – or the reading of their father's will.

When Bette's life takes an unexpected turn, she finds herself back home, and both sisters are utterly shocked to discover that her father decided to split the farm between the two of them after all. With the farm sinking under the weight of hidden debt, secrets begin to emerge – some that bring the sisters closer, some that could save the farm, and some that mean the family could lose it forever.

But it is the discovery of an old apple orchard that could change everything.

NIKKI MARMERY

Nikki worked as a financial journalist for 15 years, specializing in credit derivatives and foreign exchange markets. The financial crisis, followed swiftly by the arrival of three small children, put an end to that, and she now writes historical fiction from a small village in the Chilterns.

Her first novel, On Wilder Seas, was published by Legend Press in 2020. Inspired by a true story, it tells the tale of Maria, the woman who sailed on the Golden Hind during Francis Drake's famous circumnavigation voyage. Earlier drafts of the novel were shortlisted for the Myriad Editions First Drafts Competition 2017 and the Historical Novel Society's New Novel Award 2018. In July 2020, it was selected for the Wilbur & Niso Smith Foundation's #AdventureSociety book club. Lilith is her second novel.

In the Garden of Eden, at the beginning of time, an outrageous lie is born: that women are inferior.

Lilith and Adam are equal and happy in the Garden of Eden. But when Adam decides Lilith should submit to his will and lie beneath him, she refuses – and is banished forever from Paradise. Demonised and sidelined, Lilith watches in fury as God creates Eve, the woman who accepts her submission. But Lilith has a secret: she has already tasted the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge. Endowed with Wisdom, she knows why Asherah – God's wife and equal, the Queen of Heaven – is missing. Lilith has a plan: she will rescue Eve, find Asherah, restore balance to the world and regain her rightful place in Paradise.

Lilith is the heroine women have waited

THE RIGHT WAVELENGTH

UK Publisher: Hodder & Stoughton (UK & Comm, ex. Canada), March 2023

Genre: Romantic Comedy

Rights Available: US, Translation, Dramatisation

Sometimes you need to find yourself before you're ready to find The One.

From the outside, Lorna has everything sorted. A cool job in radio, a home to call her own, plenty of friends. And anyone would be happy to attend their school reunion if they'd had the kind of post-adolescent glow up she's managed to pull off. Library Lorna is no more, and this new Lorna is 100%, definitely over her teenage crush on Finn, the most popular boy in school.

But on the inside, Lorna's got to admit she is trying too hard. Everything is so much more difficult for her than it seems to be for everyone else. She's sure something is wrong with her, she just needs to figure out what that is - and fast, now that Finn is back in her life and she's finally got a chance of getting everything she's ever dreamed of.

"Funny and moving and true, and so wonderful to have an ND lead." - Joanna Nadin

"A beautiful novel about self discovery that will resonate with readers for decades to come." - Lizzie Huxley-Jones

"An incisive and beautifully-written novel about finding your true self , all wrapped up in a heartwarming love story which left me in floods of (happy!) tears. I absolutely adored it, and I hope everyone else will too." - Emma Pass

THE GIRL FROM NORWAY

UK Publisher: Aria/Head of Zeus (WEL), August 2023

Genre: Commercial Historical Fiction

Rights Sold: Russian (MTS Stroki)

Rights Available: Translation / Dramatisation

1942. When Helda Dahlstrøm flees her abusive husband and Nazi-occupied Norway with her eight-year-old son she doesn't know if they'll make it out alive.

In her desperate journey to safety she'll find sanctuary on the rocky shores of the Shetland Islands, rescued by Canadian Flight Sergeant Bill Gauthier.

As WWII's destruction rages at their doorsteps, can love find its way through the storm?

Extract:

'Mamma!' Eirik wailed, clinging to me as we were thrown against one wall and then the other; I could hear nothing except the roar of the storm, and we were being hurled around so violently now I was certain the boat would be smashed to matchsticks. Was the engine still running? Were those men still with us? Had we been forgotten – abandoned? Soundlessly, I began to pray, tears streaming down my face as I begged God to keep us safe for just a little longer. I do not want to die. Please do not take my son from me like this. Please do not let us drown.

As the boat lurched again I put a hand out to try and steady myself, and realised that I had put my hand down in an inch or so of water. My skirts were wet too, and I realised, with fresh horror, that the sea was coming into the boat. I tried to scramble to my feet but another jolt knocked me back down. Foul-tasting water splashed into my mouth. I coughed and spluttered. 'Mamma!' Eirik cried again in a tone I had never heard him use before.

We have to get out of here, I thought, pulling him into my arms. As the seawater lapped around our feet. I turned towards the entrance to the hidden room, wondering if I had the strength to pull the heavy boards that covered it aside.

Then the lamp flickered one last time and went out, plunging us into darkness.

Some stories are about adventure.
Some are about heroes.
Some are about ducks.

This one is about all three.

Calla North and her mum Elizabeth live a life that's far from normal. There are days when the power is cut off and Calla has to do her homework by candlelight; there are others when curious strangers want to talk to Elizabeth about her research on ducks.

When Elizabeth says yes to a once-in-a-lifetime trip to save a small brown duck, she sends Calla to the best place she knows: The School of the Good Sisters. Staffed by nuns whose preferred subjects include light aircraft maintenance, camouflage skills, and cake - lots of cake - Calla is about to discover her bravery, and to learn that when trouble comes, there's no better back-up than a Blessing of Nuns...

"Finishing this stunner of a book has left me bereft...Accomplished, clever, witty and full of fun, it is a quirky treat from start to finish."

NEVERN COVE

Status: On UK Submission, ms available

Age Group: 13+

Rights Available: All

Lily Sheehan wants nothing more than to return to Bristol and go back to before – before the divorce; before her mum got sick. She definitely doesn't want to be stuck in a tiny cottage on the edge of a remote cove in Galway, with an aunt she barely knows and only the howling wind and the Connemara ponies for company.

But Lily can't help being drawn in by the raw beauty and the unforgiving nature of the landscape. And to the boy who seems to be born from the sea each day, only to return to it at night...

For centuries, stories of Nevern Cove have crept into the mouths and hearts of the Galway people and, in their retelling, claimed a place in the forevermore of myth. Over the course of the summer, Lily uncovers more than she could ever have imagined and realises that nothing will ever be the same again.

Climbing the wooden stairs to the very top of the house once she had excused herself, all she could hope for was a long, blank sleep.

Just a month ago, life had been moving from day to night and back again in its endless cycle. No sudden noises. No bright lights. The limp curtains always hung together, like a mouth shut tight. In the Sheehan's stagnant house on Hope Chapel Hill, the beds stayed rumpled, dust lay still, spider dung collected on the sills and all the while the endless tide of her mother's breath ebbed against the walls.

Until it stopped.

In a slew of frantic gulps, twelve dozen pills forced down with spirits. It all stopped.

On that very last day, Lily was in the library on the far side of town. Dinner was simmering in the crock-pot, the laundry had been folded. Her mother was dozing on the corduroy sofa with the television muted, its phosphorescent glare skittering across the walls. It was safe to leave. Just for an hour.

And so she idled in the quiet, running her hands along the spines of books and tilting them to scrutinise the artwork of their covers. She let the pages fall open in her palms and trailed her fingertips over each fleeting passage.

But as Lily drifted through the shelves, lingering in the soft breeze of whispered conversation, her mother was listing in a tepid bath, letting the water fill her lungs, letting it rise up as she slipped below. When the bottle of cheap vodka slipped from her hand, it smashed onto the floorboards and burst into a galaxy of vicious shards that would find their way into every shadowed corner, every secret fissure of the room.

On that day, Lily took the long way home, cutting through the rec with a shopping bag swinging from the crook of her arm. She waited by the traffic lights two streets away and closed her eyes against the sun.

Those were the very last moments of the only life she'd ever known.

SPIRITBOUND

Status: On UK Submission, ms available

Age Group: YA

Rights Available: All

Sixteen-year-old Queen Clara has spent her life watching from the sidelines as her father, the Lord Protector, has sought to harness electricity in order to eradicate the practice of spiritcasting which killed her mother, all while keeping her own spiritcasting abilities a secret. But when a band of rebels attack the capital, a spirit calling itself Makaris appears, claiming to have knowledge of what really happened to her mother and promising to lead her to the proof.

Nineteen-year-old Finn has spent the last three years imprisoned in the castle. When his mother's attempt to stage a prison break results in her capture, Finn vows to go to any means necessary to get her free, even if that means joining forces with the Lord Protector to hunt down his daughter. But when he catches up to Clara and realises that she is a spiritcaster, Finn faces an impossible decision: save his mother, or help the girl he's falling in love with?

Her father gestured above his head. 'Through this wire runs a current at 180 volts. We hope to develop this wire into a full grid by the end of the decade, providing...'

180 volts. Clara dug her nails into her palms behind her back, willing her smile to remain in place. Her body could tolerate electricity – to a point. But where that point lay varied on a range of factors. There was a reason why all Royal Guards came equipped with electrical manacles as standard.

Raucous applause punctuated the end of her father's speech, and Clara's heart pounded as he untied the ceremonial rope. It was almost time. Inside the tram, filament bulbs suddenly came alive, making the windows gleam with hazy spots of orange light.

Her father didn't hesitate. He swung his body up over the threshold with the agility of a man half his age.

Clara knew she must follow. It was too late to invent some excuse, to feign some illness. No, she must feign 'wellness' – whatever the electricity might do to her.

Please let me endure it.

She took a step past the rope barrier. Another step brought her to the tramcar.

Heat from a thousand eyes radiated onto her back as she gathered her stiff lace skirt and underskirts in one hand and reached up to the metal support with her other. She watched her gloved fingers coil around the bar. Her heeled boot rose in the air and planted itself on the raised floor of the tramcar. And her body crossed the threshold.

The pressure was instantaneous. Expecting it made no difference, and an involuntary gasp escaped her throat. No!

She struggled against a thick, squeezing band that constricted her chest and throat, aware her gasp had drawn her father's gaze. Someone behind her – one of the waiting lords – gave a soft cough of impatience. They were all watching her. They would all know. She had to move. Now.

BRENNA HASSETT

Dr Brenna Ryan Hassett is a bioarchaeologist whose career has taken her around the globe, researching the past using the clues left behind in human remains.

She is 1/4 of the team behind TrowelBlazers, a wide ranging project that does everything in its power, from designing dolls to creating art exhibits shown in the Houses of Parliament, to bring the lost stories of women in the digging sciences back to light.

Her first book with Bloomsbury Sigma – Built on Bones: 15,000 Years of Urban Life and Death – was well received by critics at the LA Times, the Guardian, and the Times (UK), which named it one of the top 10 science books of 2018.

GROWING UP HUMAN

UK Publisher: Bloomsbury (WEL), June 2022

Genre: Pop Science Non-Fiction

Rights Sold: Simple Chinese (Beijing United), Russian (AST Prime), Turkish (LiberPlus)

Rights Available: Translation

In Growing Up Human, bioarchaeologist Brenna Hassett brings the science of physical anthropology to bear on understanding how our evolutionary history has shaped a phenomenon every reader will have experienced: childhood.

The development of a foetus is an extraordinary biological process by itself, but the story of how we grow up began long before any of us were even born.

Paleoanthropological science has revealed that deep in our hominid lineage we began to diverge from other primates by giving birth to fatter, more helpless infants and developed one of humanity's most striking adaptations – the evolution of childhood; a long period of dependence and social learning that makes us the animals we are today.

This is the first book to cover both the evolution of human children as biological phenomena and the cultural impact visible in the archaeological record for a popular readership. It explains why you should expect what you expect when you're expecting by examining every aspect of human development, from the evolution of our large-headed, helpless, high-fat babies right through to the social importance of childhood and adolescence, how this has changed over the millennia, and how we can interpret the story of childhood through the ages using teeth, skulls and bones.

“Superb . and often hilarious. Growing Up Human is what happens when science meets an unusually entertaining and uninhibited writer . should be appreciated by anyone pregnant, planning to be pregnant, or who has ever had a child or been one.” – Wall Street Journal

“A thought-provoking discussion about why humans experience a long childhood ... Hassett artfully dissects the sometimes problematic dogma surrounding growth and development, such as whether physical size predicts life span; debunks common myths, such as the idea that the reproductive cycles of women who regularly interact with one another will synchronize; and rejects falsehoods, such as the idea that toxins are produced during the menstrual cycle.” – *Science

“Bioarchaeologist Brenna Hassett's intriguing, entertaining book looks at childhood. She examines distinctive aspects from messy mating and dangerous pregnancies to the puzzling human fondness for formal education and love of the written word.” – *Nature

“With characteristic wit, humour and verve, Brenna Hassett delves deep into our evolutionary past and inner nature to explain why humans are 'the ape who never grew up'.” – *Alice Roberts

“Bursting with fascinating ideas and surprising facts, Growing Up Human pulls off a masterly trick, with such lucid and entertaining writing that even complex scientific ideas slip down a treat. This is human evolution at its most captivating; clever and charming, just like our amazing babies.” – *Rebecca Wragg Sykes, author of Kindred

SANDRA LAWRENCE

Sandra Lawrence has written for all the broadsheets and over 60 magazines and websites. Her books include Anthology of Amazing Women, Atlas of Monsters and The Witch's Garden. She has been fascinated with the ruined gardens at Warley Place since her very early teenage years, and with the ruins' owner,

Ellen Willmott, for not much less than that. Five years spent recovering Willmott's physical—and digital—world have taken that fascination to an obsession that will stretch long beyond the publication of Miss Willmott's Ghosts.

MISS WILLMOTT'S GHOSTS: THE EXTRAORDINARY LIFE AND GARDENS OF A FORGOTTEN GENIUS

UK Publisher: Bonnier Books (UK/Comm ex. Canada), May 2022

Genre: Narrative non-fiction; historical biography

Rights Available: All

Hidden in the shadows of once-spectacular gardens in Essex, France and Italy, a story lies sleeping, of a woman whose ferocious talent marked a path in Victorian horticultural discovery and cultivation. Much like her gardens, however, her reputation has been left in ruins, her achievements are all-but forgotten. Her name was Ellen Ann Willmott and these are her ghosts.

The gardens of this horticultural and social maverick became spaces of beauty and abundance, filled to bursting with unusual species and highly prized cultivars. Miss Willmott's reputation preceded her, experts of the age flocked to consult on everything from fussy exotics to previously unknown species. There was little her photographer's lens did not capture.

At the pinnacle of Willmott's shining career, however, a series of events cast a shadow across these accolades, propelling this horticultural wonder and her achievements into a downward spiral. Her battle to survive led to an enduring image of Miss Willmott: veritable genius, maybe, but 'formidable'; a miserly, cantankerous spinster who sprinkled sea-holly seeds in other people's gardens. The legend survives today, but there is much more to this prickly tale.

In Miss Willmott's Ghosts, author Sandra Lawrence lifts the creaking lid on a previously undiscovered archive and uncovers the truth behind this elusive legend.

Hidden between the virtuoso achievements, joyous creativity and celebrity rivalries lies a tangled tale of squandered inheritance, unconventional love, and, the heart of it all, a trailblazing talent.

Extract:

Brambles part, vague outlines form and strange apparitions manifest in the tangle. Moss-covered phantoms morph into broken cold frames. Heaps of brick become crumbled steps; hollows turn into underground chambers. For a brief, intoxicating moment in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, Warley played host to one of the most important gardens in the country. Then it descended into darkness, taking Miss Willmott with it.

The old walled garden shelters more visions: an incongruously exotic Chusan palm, an ancient camellia, the remains of tightly clipped box hedging, now blousy shrubs rapidly succumbing to the modern horrors of box-tree caterpillar. Black and red terracotta tiles peep through fallen leaves; the crumbling remains of a fountain just about cling to existence. A raised pond in the labyrinth of ruined hothouses miraculously still holds water.

Even Miss Willmott's home is a phantasm. Jumbled foundations and mosaic floors hint at a music room, a library, a chapel. White-tiled, fern-fronded walls of a basement kitchen merge into the curved brick arches of a long-dead wine cellar. Victims of landslides, rockfalls and even a Second World War bomb, they whisper: of champagne, of cigars and dancing 'til three. It all seems a long time ago.
