All my favourite cars and trucks – in one hidden objects book

In the city, on the farm, on the building site or on the race track: there are brilliant cars and trucks everywhere! This book is packed with illustrations of the best, biggest, strangest and funniest of them. There's a lovely, busy new scene on every spread, and alongside vehicles there are tons of other fun things to discover. The drawings are both accurate and witty, and each vehicle is driven by an animal...

As a very special bonus, there are fun searches on every page!

- A busy hidden objects book about the most important vehicles around us – there are countless things to discover!
- Fun and fact-filled rhymes
- Detailed depictions of all the vehicles, right down to their technical aspects

Doctors aren't scary!

Lina and Finn have come to Dr Bear for a check-up. But what happens when you go to the paediatrician? Should you be scared? Of course not! Dr Bear and her team are nice as pie, and the check-up is over before you know it. And when Lina starts feeling a bit tired, Dr Bear knows exactly how to help her.

A fun board picture book for children aged 2+, which takes away the fear of going to the doctor's

- An important everyday topic – seeing the paediatrician for a check-up
- Helps parents navigate tricky situations and teach their kids about essential everyday things
- Conveys everyday facts in a child-friendly way, and takes away the fear of going to the doctor's
- Modern illustrations by Tessa Rath accompany Orso's cheerful rhymes

The big hidden object book for the summer holidays

It's summer, and everyone's off to the seaside. On 14 lovingly illustrated pages, we join them as they do all the things you do when you go away: from packing your bags to the journey itself and going to the beach. The families' travel plans are as diverse as they are: Henry and his granddad have come in a camper van, and are looking forward to exploring nature. Tom and his mother love spending holidays with their noses stuck in a book. Siblings Olivia and Benito love splashing about in the sea with their dads, while Said and Sally spend their time drawing pictures. Thanks to Cliff's busy and detailed illustrations, little ones can not only enjoy a brilliant diversity of characters and holiday activities, but learn that 'family' can mean different things to different people.

- An inclusive hidden object book with exciting, diverse characters

When I Feel Brave

Date of publication: March 13, 2024

4+

40 colour illustrations

A story about fear and courage

What you don't know can be scary. In this stunningly expressive picture book, Britta Teckentrup explores what it means to be brave. She tells the story of a girl who walks through a dark wood all on her own and is startled by a bear: at first, the girl is afraid of the bear – it's so huge and strange... But as she allows herself to get closer to it, the bear becomes her companion, and eventually even her friend.

This book is the perfect starting-point for a discussion about fear, with children of play school or primary school age. It shows how paralysing your fears can sometimes be, but also how good it feels when you confront and overcome them.

- The sequel to "Wütend" (When I See Red), this is yet another evocative picture book about emotions by Teckentrup
- Helps children understand their feelings and talk about them
- With powerful illustrations by the author

Pin-pricking is a popular crafting technique for little ones. It promotes fine motor skills, concentration and hand-eye coordination. If you still find using scissors a bit tricky, the pin is a great way to 'cut' paper. With the help of this book, young crafting artists aged 4+ can pin-prick their favourite animals, fold them, stand them up, and play with them. These 25 three-dimensional paper animals are easy to create, and include a sea lion, (land) lion, giraffe and flamingo.

- 25 three-dimensional paper animals you can 'cut out' with a pin, fold and play with
- Pricking holes is easier than cutting paper, and popular with kids still learning how to use scissors
- Promotes dexterity, focus and hand-eye coordination

Do-it-yourself magic: craft and confound!

Want to create spellbinding magic tricks using just paper, scissors, glue and pens? No problem! With these simple crafts ideas, any child aged 6+ can become a proper little wizard. Here, they'll learn not only how to create the props for their own little show, but also how to perform tricks that will leave their audience speechless. Includes instructions for three performances, each based on five themed tricks, covering everything from disappearing felt rabbits to card tricks. Children learn how to present the tricks with a flourish, and at the back of the book you'll find crafting templates too. Great fun for little magicians – and of course their audiences!

My Meadow: Discover a Wonderful World

NON-FICTION PICTURE BOOK

Date of publication: February 28, 2024

6+

With 80 colour illustrations and photos

Rustling grass, brightly coloured flowers, butterflies, humming insects – join Jan Haft on a journey of discovery in a meadow paradise. Here, hundreds of plants and fascinating animals live alongside each other in a fascinating community. It's the most diverse place of all, but also threatened more than any other.

"My Meadow" uses child-friendly terms to describe the meadow habitat, and explain why it needs protecting.

- Jan Haft is the foremost specialist on meadows
- Children find out why, at a time when insects and other species are dying out, we must protect the meadows
- Haft couches his extensive knowledge in accessible terms in this non-fiction book for kids
- With lots of fascinating photos by the author himself
- Detailed and charming illustrations by Claire Lenkova

Pets for everyone!

Milli-Lilli, Lia and Tassilo love animals – but sadly their parents won't allow them to keep pets. The obvious solution, of course, is to set up a pet-sitting club. All animals are welcome, big and small, hairy or armoured, and even a real dinosaur finds his way there! The kids do everything to make sure that the animals have everything they need, and more. Whether it's a leisure park for the hamster or a beach paradise for the turtle – nothing is too much. Of course, sometimes things go wrong, but when there's three of you, everything's at least three times as much fun!

A hilarious story for children aged 4+ – with or without pets!

- Self-contained stories for the whole family to enjoy together

The new instalment in the popular children's series – a proven concept for acquiring reading skills

Theo loves nothing better than kicking a ball around. But he's never been a member of a proper football club. This changes when his new classmate Jenny heads off for a training session, and Theo tags along. He quickly becomes more self-confident, and soon develops into a really good player. If only there wasn't his annoying teammate Marcel to deal with. But when their team enters a competition, the two are forced to work together to bring the cup home...

When a child finds learning to read difficult, many parents say, 'Why don't we read together? Let's take it in turns: I'll do the first bit, you do the next.' That's why 'First Me, Then You', our most popular series for beginners, has been conceived especially for reading together.

The sequel to the hilarious Safari Mondays is finally here!

Life in the jungle is peaceful, so long as you stay in your tree. Apollo the toucan and his friends strictly stick to the first rule of the forest: never climb down! Even the bravest animal in their treeshare, Ronaldo the sloth, only dares to clamber down the ancient tree once a week – on Tuesdays – to go to the loo. It's a daring feat, which none of the other beasts would ever attempt themselves! But one evening, everything changes: humans arrive and set up a research camp. It looks like they'll be staying for a while. But Ronaldo is dying for the loo... what can his friends do to help? How do you get a sloth down from a tree, when you're scared of the unknown?

"Wild Weeks" is an exciting new series for early readers, with lots of animal adventures, loveable characters and fun facts

- Loveable animal characters, fast-paced adventure and lots of witty wordplay
- Charmingly illustrated throughout in 4c by Stefanie Jeschke
- Learn useful facts about the animals that live in the rainforest

An icky-sticky so-and-so

It's blue, glittery and has a speech impediment. It shouldn't actually exist at all. Its name is Ick, and it's a blob of sticky slime secretly living in the sink. Siblings Lou and Lukas were only planning to create one last batch of slime with the mysterious glittery sand they got at the flea market. But who'd have thought that the slime would suddenly take on a life of its own? Ick is quite obstinate and a bit of a know-it-all. But it's also hilarious, and can turn into all kinds of things: a hula hoop, a washing-up sponge, a rubber ball and more. No wonder Lou and Lukas want to spend all day with Ick! But keeping their chatty friend hidden from the rest of the world isn't easy...

Kids are guaranteed to love this hilarious new series

- The brilliantly icky first book in a new series about Ick the sticky blob of slime
- Lou and Lukas are experts on slime, and have managed to bring Ick to life (despite warnings not to)
- Ick can't stop moving, and keeps the kids on their toes with his shenanigans
- A magical new friendship leads to all kinds of chaos and adventure
- Witty, lively and perfect for the target readership
- Hilarious illustrations by Martina Schachenhuber

The janitor's been kidnapped!

There's chaos at the Emmy Noether School: much-loved janitor Montgomery Power has disappeared! There are blocked toilets and flickering strip lights that need fixing, the smart whiteboards are going nuts, and in the 'Room of Failed Experiments' a few particularly volatile inventions are on the loose. The pupils and teachers have their hands full getting the situation under control. The head, Dr Renate Schröder, a.k.a. Doc, pulls out all the stops and creates a task force consisting of Elton, Zuleika, Tessa, Franjo and Jo – who instantly suspect their arch-enemies, the 'Billys' from the neighbouring Willibald Gluck School. Are Jördis, Yuri 'the Weasel' Ossowski and their scheming head, Sibylle van Vogel, behind all the trouble? And what does Monty Power's mysterious robot have to do with it?

- Magnificent pranks, fantastic schemes – a dizzying rollercoaster action ride
- Two rival schools trying to outdo each other; hilarious and quirky

Four 'troubled teens' on a very special Swedish boat trip

Leo, Grete, Alex and Yannis have one thing in common: their families have lost all patience and sent them to a 'therapy camp'. The Swedish woods aren't exactly a desert, but the four of them still feel cast out and betrayed. Alex hates being without her friends, but can be a one-girl-gang if need be. Grete is the perfect victim, with her fancy clothes – and it's clearly the first time she's been away from her mum. For Yannis, the camp is his last chance, so he does exactly what he always does: he lashes out. Leo normally avoids guys like Yannis, but since they've confiscated his smartphone he's close to losing his cool too.

YA author Caroline Brinkmann was born in the far north of Germany in 1987. Her debut novel won the Lovelybooks Best German-language Debut Authors Prize, and her most recent book spent two consecutive months at the top of the fantasy bestsellers list. She writes whenever she can, preferably while listening to power ballads and with plenty of coffee within reach. Her love for the sea and for Hamburg provided the inspiration for Aurora: Whispering Shadows. When she isn't immersing herself in otherworldly realms, she practises medicine.

She's a real estate heiress – he's a bad boy hockey player. What could possibly go wrong?

Rosalie is about to make her debut as the head of her family's Canadian business. But the past has terrible timing: somehow, the media have got wind of old nude photos and a last-gasp escape from cyberbullies. They've pursued her all the way to her college on the East Coast in the US. But she's not the only one in trouble. Jayden, who's about to hit the big time as a professional hockey player, is in the same boat as her: if the media get wind of his party-boy lifestyle, he can wave goodbye to his contract. Rosalie and Jayden make a pact: to keep the gossips happy, they'll pretend to be a dream couple in love. But will it work? If only Jayden didn't have a yen for one-night stands, and people would stop spreading rumours about Rosalie...

The eagerly awaited new book in this romance series set at Atlantic University

- Romantic, sexy, gripping – a love story that'll melt your heart
- For fans of Elle Kennedy, Mona Kasten and Stella Tack

‘Someone once told me that the stars signify hope. And you’ve shown me that it’s true’

When Carey takes a job as waiter on the modern luxury liner Ocean Heart, she has just one goal: to find her mother, who has disappeared without a trace. On board, she unexpectedly bumps into Eden, her childhood friend from the orphanage. The introverted boy with storm-grey eyes, who was so passionate about the stars, has grown up into a good-looking guy. But for some reason, he wants nothing to do with Carey, and drops her for his mates and all the glittering parties on board the liner. Hurt, Carey resolves to focus on finding her mother.

Yet soon after, Carey and Eden’s paths cross again, and sparks fly. But their feelings are doomed to come to nothing – relationships between staff and guests are strictly taboo. And it’s not just the house rules that stand between them...

Isabel Clivia was born in one of Germany’s loveliest river valleys in 1994. While studying German and Politics, she rediscovered her love for fiction, and started writing her own. She loves nights under a starry sky, gentle indie pop and watching all kinds of sports – most of which she’ll never try out herself. Her stories feature strong heroines who bravely fight for their dreams, and for love.
